Acknowledgment of Country

We acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of the land on which we live, work and play.

We pay our respects to Darkinjung country, and Elders past and present.

We recognise the continued connection to these lands and waterways and extend this acknowledgement to the homelands and stories of those who also call this place home.

We recognise our future leaders and the shared responsibility to care for and protect our place and people.

Mayors Message

I'm pleased to present Council's 2026-2030 Disability Inclusion Action Plan. This four-year plan sets out the practical steps we'll take to make our community more accessible and enjoyable.

Council is committed to creating an accessible and inclusive community for people living with disability. Since the development of our previous plan, we've installed beach matting, widened footpaths, upgraded outdoor play spaces with accessible features, improved bus stop accessibility, ensured Council's outdoor events adopt inclusive practices, and supported inclusive sports days, and more.

This action plan explores the themes of positive community attitudes and behaviours, liveable communities, meaningful employment opportunities, and accessible systems and processes. Our goal is to ensure fair and equitable access in all these areas.

Improving access and inclusion improves quality of life.

Thank you to everyone who provided feedback, in community workshops, at shopping centre pop-ups and through our online surveys. Your ideas about what's working well and what can be improved has helped to shape this action plan.

Heartfelt thanks to Council's Access and Inclusion Reference Group, who continue to provide important guidance through their expertise and lived experience.

Through this plan, we're committed to working together to create more positive outcomes in our community.

Mayor Lawrie McKinna

Why planning for access and inclusion matters on the Central Coast

1

Why planning for access and inclusion matters on the Central Coast

1.1 Access and inclusion is important

Access and inclusion matters because everyone should be able to take part in everyday life - whether that's going to school or work, attending events, using public transport, enjoying parks and libraries, or just catching up with friends at a café. When spaces and services aren't accessible, people with disability can be excluded from opportunities that others take for granted.

Disability comes in many forms. Some disabilities are visible, like using a wheelchair or mobility aid, but many are not. People can be neurodivergent, have chronic health conditions, sensory processing differences, or mental health challenges. Just because you can't see a disability doesn't mean it isn't there. That's why access and inclusion is about being thoughtful, flexible and based on listening to individual needs and lived experience.

Access and inclusion is not just about physical access like ramps and lifts but also about making sure information is easy to access, read and understand, that staff are welcoming and respectful, and systems are set up to include everyone. True inclusion means thinking about what might create a barrier for someone and removing those barriers.

When we design communities and services with everyone in mind, we create a better place for all of us. Parents with prams, older people and people with temporary injuries all benefit from accessible design. Inclusion isn't just the right thing to do, it makes our communities more welcoming, connected and fair.

People with disability are experts in their own lives, and inclusion means valuing their voice and experience. People are not disabled by their impairment, but disabled by the social, physical and economic barriers in our society. It's our collective responsibility to identify and remove those barriers.

At the heart of access and inclusion is respect. It's about recognising the rights of people with disability to live with dignity, make choices, and be included in all areas of community life. When we remove barriers and challenge assumptions, we build a stronger community for everyone.

Access and inclusion matters because there are a lot of people with disability on the Central Coast

On the Central Coast, more people are living with disability or chronic illness, are older, or are carers for someone with disability compared to Greater Sydney

- 7% of us on the Central Coast have a disability (compared to 5% of people in Greater Sydney)
- 38% of us have a long-term health condition (compared to 28% in Greater Sydney)
- 13% provide unpaid care for others (compared to 11% in Greater Sydney)
- 22% of us are aged over 65 years (compared to 11% in Greater Sydney)
- 11% have a mental health condition (6.6% in Greater Sydney)

In 2021, the ABS reported that 24,000 people living on the Central Coast (7% of the population) required assistance with day-to-day activities due to disability.

Over 35,000 people (13% of the population) provided unpaid assistance to someone with a disability, long-term illness or who required it because of old age.

There are people with disability living in every suburb across the Central Coast

Some areas of the Central Coast are home to more people with a disability than others:

- Toukley – Canton Beach: 11%
- Charmhaven – Lake Haven: 10%
- Erina: 10%
- Woy Woy – Blackwall: 10%
- Wyong: 10%

It matters for Dionne...

Dionne has called the Central Coast home for nearly 40 years. She loves bushwalking, swimming at the beach and camping at Patonga. As a life member of the Central Coast Deaf Group, Dionne has helped organise social events and advocates for better access for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing community. Dionne was born deaf and uses hearing aids, but a lack of interpreters continues to create barriers, especially at Council events. Her wish is for more people to learn Auslan and to be able to attend more events that are Auslan interpreted. For Dionne, inclusion means being able to participate fully in community life and be understood.

Our Disability Inclusion Action Plan 2026 – 2030

Our Disability Inclusion Action Plan 2026 – 2030

2.1 Our vision

Our vision is that the Central Coast is a place where everyone can participate fully, move around with ease, and feel welcome – whether we live, work, visit or play here.

2.2 What this Plan is about

This Disability Inclusion Action Plan sets out how we can make the Central Coast a place where everyone feels welcome, can get around easily, and take part fully whether they live, work, visit or play.

The Disability Inclusion Action Plan is guided by important laws and principles, both in Australia and internationally, that protect the rights of people with disability.

The Disability Discrimination Act 1992 makes it unlawful to discriminate against someone because of disability. In line with this, Council is committed to making all our services and facilities accessible and inclusive, and meeting the requirements of the Act to the highest possible standard.

In 2008, Australia ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. This marked a major shift in how disability is understood, recognising that people with disability have the same rights as everyone else, and that governments have a responsibility to promote and protect those rights.

In 2021, all levels of government across Australia adopted Australia's Disability Strategy 2021–2031. This national 10-year plan focuses on improving the lives of people with disability, their families, and carers by putting individuals' choices and needs at the centre of decision-making.

In NSW, the Disability Inclusion Act 2014 reinforced this approach. It is based on the Social Model of disability, which says that disability is not about the person or their impairment, but about the barriers they face such as inaccessible environments, negative attitudes, poor communication, and lack of support.

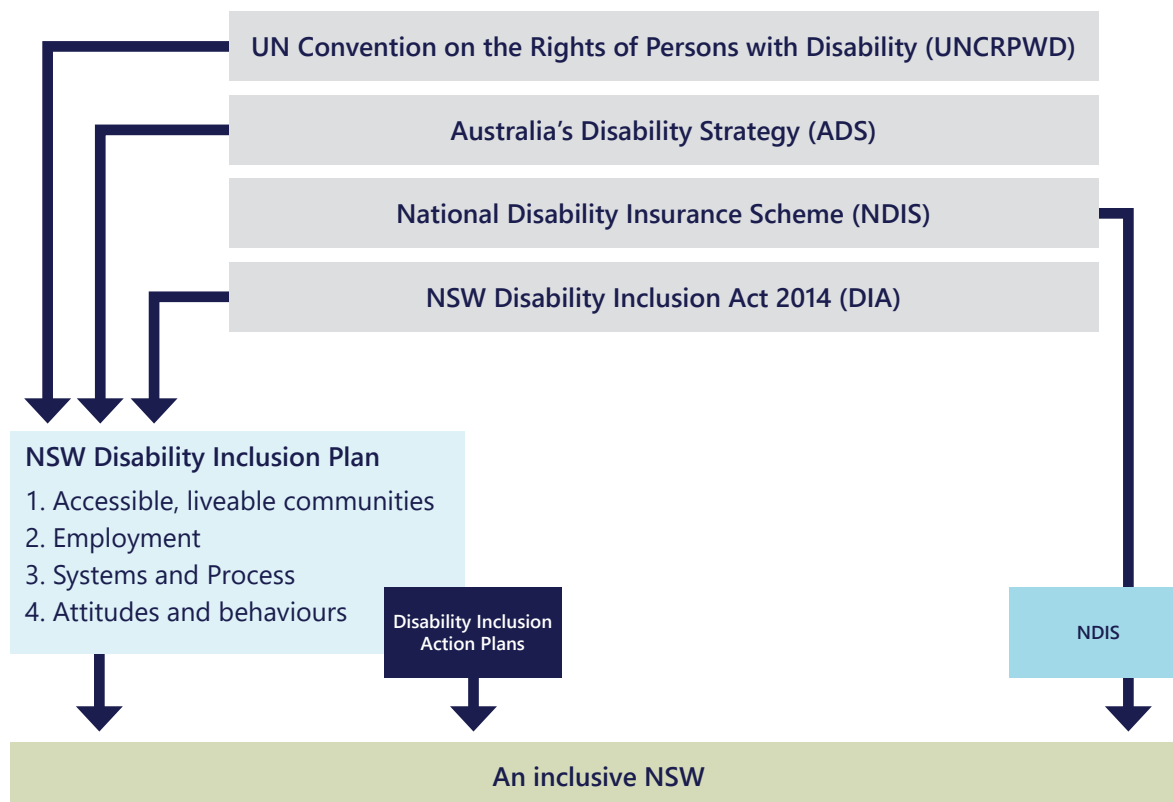

The Act requires all NSW councils to develop a Disability Inclusion Action Plan to put these principles into practice at a local level. Disability Inclusion Action Plans outline the practical steps that local councils will take to drive inclusion for people with disability within their community.

This plan is Central Coast Council's commitment to doing just that.

2.3 How the Disability Inclusion Action Plan fits within the Legislative framework

Our vision is that the Central Coast is a place where everyone can participate fully, move around with ease, and feel welcome – whether we live, work, visit or play here.

The flowchart demonstrates the hierarchy and connectedness from the UN level down to actionable plans at the community level.

2.4 How we developed the Disability Inclusion Action Plan

This plan is informed by extensive research, community and internal staff engagement. We completed the following:

Review of previous Disability Inclusion Action Plan - To see what progress had been made and where there were still gaps.

Strategic review - Aligning with national and state government priorities and Council's plans.

Demographic analysis - Examining the demographic make-up of people with disability and carers in NSW and the Central Coast.

Industry benchmarking - Reviewing other council Disability Inclusion Action Plans to identify what's working elsewhere, where our plan could improve and what actions councils are taking across the state.

Community engagement - Engaging with people with disability, Council's Access and Inclusion Reference Group members, carers, local disability sector, community members and Council staff to understand what's working well and areas for improvement.

Focus areas

There are four focus areas that every local government organisation is required by the NSW Government to address in their Disability Inclusion Action Plan.

These focus areas will help us achieve our vision. They are:

1. Attitudes and Behaviours - To increase positive attitudes and behaviours towards people with disability

Negative assumptions and stigma are still major barriers for people with disability. This includes in workplaces, schools, public spaces and in day-to-day interactions. Shifting attitudes takes time, and starts with awareness, creating opportunities to interact and challenging ideas, assumptions and stereotypes. It's not something that happens overnight – it's a long-term goal that we can work towards step by step.

2. Liveable Communities - To make the Central Coast more accessible, inclusive and liveable.

Liveable Communities is about making sure people with disability have access to all the important parts of community life. That includes safe housing, transport, recreation, events, activities and social connection. It includes physical access, such as well-maintained footpaths, ramps and accessible toilets and ensuring spaces are easy to use, welcoming and meet a range of needs.

3. Employment - To increase employment of people with disability in meaningful roles.

People with disability experience many barriers with finding and keeping a job. Inclusive employment means increased income, reduced social isolation and independence. For businesses, benefits include access to a broader range of skills and dedicated and hardworking staff.

4. Systems and Processes - To ensure that Council systems, processes, services and communications are accessible, inclusive and easy to navigate.

People with disability should be able to access all the services that are available to the rest of the community as well as have a say about issues that affect them.

Did you know that Central Coast Council has an Access and Inclusion Reference Group to advise us about the needs of people with disability?

The Central Coast Council's Access and Inclusion Reference Group brings together people with lived experience of disability, carers, and professionals from the disability sector to advise Council on how to improve access and inclusion across the region. The group meets regularly to provide feedback on Council plans, policies and services, drawing on their diverse lived experience to highlight barriers and suggest practical ways to address them.

Members come from a range of backgrounds, including those with expertise in advocacy, planning, communication, and accessibility. Their input has helped shape key Council initiatives, including the development of this Disability Inclusion Action Plan, and they're often consulted on matters like infrastructure upgrades, event planning, and community engagement efforts.

The Access and Inclusion Reference Group plays an important advisory role giving Council a direct link to the experiences and insights of people with disability. This helps ensure that policies and services are more inclusive and better reflect the needs of the community. Expressions of interest are opened periodically, and Council encourages people with diverse experiences of disability to apply.

Community engagement

To help shape this new Plan, Central Coast Council ran a broad community engagement program. The aim was to identify and understand the continuing barriers to access, what's working, what could be improved, the progress Council has made over the past four years, and what people want to see in the next plan.

4.1 What we did

More than 450 people took part. We offered a mix of online and in-person options so people could participate in ways that suited them. Activities included:

- An online survey
- A pop-up stall
- One-on-one interviews
- In-person workshops
- Access and Inclusion Reference Group workshop
- Online workshops
- Internal staff workshops
- Community forums
- Focus groups including Central Coast Disability Interagency and local industry/sector groups
- Increasing accessible parking spaces in town centres, beaches, pools, leisure centres, libraries and community facilities.
- Event accessibility and promotion of accessible features.
- More employment opportunities, accessible recruitment practices and welcoming workplaces.
- More regular long-term creative and cultural programs.
- Make it easier to interact with and get information from Council e.g. accessible platforms, Auslan interpreted and Easy English information.
- More deliberate and meaningful engagement with people with disability that is accessible to them.

4.2 What you told us

The key priorities are:

- Judgement and stigma are still common.
- Continue to raise awareness about disability, its diversity and educate the community and local businesses e.g. promoting the Hidden Disabilities Sunflower.
- Recognition of improvements made to date including making beaches, libraries, playgrounds and walking trails more accessible.
- Despite improvements, many still face barriers getting around such as beach mats not long enough, uneven footpaths, lack of signage, Accessible Adult Changing Facilities and inaccessible toilets.
- A common frustration was the lack of accessibility of information, and the time and energy people spend researching whether a place is accessible – only to discover it isn't when they get there.

Planning for disability inclusion matters for Rachel...

Rachel has lived on the Central Coast for seven years and loves the area's mix of city, country and coast, especially when she's able to walk barefoot on the beach with her assistance dog. She runs her own pet minding hobby business and dreams of travelling the world while educating others about autism and invisible disability. While she has the support of family, friends, a great psychologist and her assistance dog, Rachel still faces challenges being accepted in her community. She says some people where she lives believe people with disability shouldn't live independently. She wants to see more awareness, more kindness and more chances for people with disability to live life on their own terms.

5.2 Liveable communities

To make the Central Coast more accessible, inclusive and liveable.

I'm a life member of CC Deaf group and we organise social events for people on the coast who are Deaf or Hard of Hearing. I love going to the movies with open captions, bushwalking, taking my dog for walks and camping at Patonga. We would love more interpreters at the Council events and for them to be better promoted. (Dionne)

Planning for disability inclusion matters for Annette...

Annette has lived on the Central Coast for over 40 years and loves the mix of bush and beach. She enjoys yoga, spending time at the Gosford Regional Gallery and Edogawa Garden and taking her grandkids to the park. As someone with multiple family members with disability from dementia and autism to hearing loss and mobility issues Annette has a deep understanding of the everyday barriers people face. She's also been a champion of inclusion at work, helping roll out the Sunflower initiative. For Annette, inclusion is about education, awareness and making sure no one is left behind regardless of whether their disability is visible or not.

5.3 Employment

To increase employment of people with disability in meaningful roles

Monitoring, reviewing and reporting

The Disability Inclusion Action Plan will be delivered across all of Council, with each business unit responsible for delivering actions, tracking progress and reporting on outcomes. The Disability Inclusion Action Plan is aligned with Council's Integrated Planning and Reporting Framework including the Community Strategic Plan, Delivery Program and Operational Plans.

Council will continue to work with the Access and Inclusion Reference Group to look at practical ways to implement the Plan, check in on progress and adapt, if required, to meet changing community and organisational priorities.

How we will monitor progress

The internal Reference Group made up of representatives from across Council business units and led by the Executive Sponsor, who will monitor the progress of the Plan over the next four years.

Progress on actions will be tracked quarterly by each business unit and shared with Council's internal Reference Group, made up of representatives from across all relevant business units and led by the Executive Sponsor.

The Access and Inclusion Officer will support the implementation process, provide support and advice and feedback to teams on the implementation of actions to achieve positive outcomes for people with disability.

How we will engage community

Council will continue to work closely with the Access and Inclusion Reference Group to ensure the Plan stays relevant to the lived experience of people with disability.

We will host annual targeted engagement sessions with people with disability.

Ongoing feedback from community members will help inform the delivery of actions in the Plan. Feedback will be captured via Council's website, directly to the Access and Inclusion Officer and through Council's yearly community satisfaction survey.

How we will report and evaluate

Annual progress will be published in Council's Annual Report, including updates on all ongoing and completed actions. A copy will also be provided to the NSW Minister for Disability Inclusion in line with statutory requirements.

Quarterly progress summary updates are provided by Disability Inclusion Action Plan action owners through Council's Performance and Reporting process.

An evaluation of the Disability Inclusion Action Plan will be completed in the final year of the Plan, and learnings will inform the development of the next Disability Inclusion Action Plan.
